Blazer Nation,

While we may be “socially distant,” today, we are one, and we feel this anxiety and uncertainty together. It is okay to feel the weight and emotions that come with this new reality, and it is okay to have questions. Might we, in this season, practice love, compassion, and kindness with great commitment to each other, especially our seniors and those who may be made vulnerable through this situation. I have unwavering faith in the administration, faculty, and staff who are working tirelessly to respond to this situation. I know they will continue to do right by our students as they carry out this directive.

We will get through this together.
